VOL. IX. RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1911. NO. 43.

From The Wigwam

By BELLE MANIATES

It was a small and not fashionable resort, such as spring up in mushroom multitude in the lake region of the north. Roger Sheldon had sought the obscurity obstensibly for a fortnight's fishing, but in reality to be alone with his thoughts and to seek solace in the pine forests for an unrequited love.

If he had been younger, or, perhaps, older, he would have turned to mundane material for alleviation, but he was a quiet, self-constrained man with a becoming suspicion of gray already at his temples. He was so entirely relegated to the "oldest set" that he had scarcely entered into the thoughts or life of young Judith Cary until he asked her to marry him.

She had said him nay, but she had been so startled by the look she had met in his eyes that the impression had served to keep him in her memory; but Roger, who had worshiped mostly from afar, quietly and manfully accepted his rebuff and withdrew to this remote spot that he might not suffer the acute anguish of witnessing her acceptance of the devotions of another man.

By the irony of fate the names above his on the register were "Mrs. Richard Cary, Miss Cary."

While deliberating whether to submit to Nemesis or to beat a retreat unseen, for his arrival was at a very early hour in the morning, Judith appeared before him on the dock, winsome and winning.

"Oh," she said, coloring with the consciousness of a young girl.

"I thought you always went to the seashore," he said, after they had formally shaken hands.

"Mother is not very well, and the doctor prescribed a quiet, secluded spot."

"Isn't this an early hour for you to be out?' he asked.

"I was going to row over to that stretch of woods across the bay to see some Indians who are camping there.

Standing Like a Sentinel Before One of Them.

They are civilized Indians, but mother would not approve, so I am running away."

"I was running away, too," he said, smiling. "Suppose we run away or row away together."

"From whom are you running away?" she asked as she stepped into the boat.

"Myself."

"You can't do that, you know," she said sagely, and feeling that they were on dangerous ground, she deftly changed the subject.

When they were nearing the woods, he looked up anxiously at a darkening sky.

"Storms come up quickly in these parts," he said, bending to the oars with renewed strength. Before they could land, the rain came down in torrents, the wind blew a gale, lashing the waves to a fury, and the sudden darkness was only relieved by lurid flashes of lightning. Sheldon glanced at his young companion keenly.

"Are you afraid?" he asked, curtly.

"No," she replied gravely, but the thought came to her that she was only unafraid because she felt such entire reliance upon his protection.

After a short tramp through the dense woods, they came upon a clearing where three tents were pitched. Standing like a sentinel before one of them was an Indian. At the sound of their voices, a white woman, soft-eyed and mild-mannered came forth. She at once took Judith inside the tent and brought forth clean dry clothing. While donning these garments, Judith chatted with the woman who told her that her husband had attended school at a mission for some time, and that she had there met and married him, but that his wandering nature finally prevailed against new ways, and they camped and traveled during the summer.

"Doesn't it seem odd to be married to an Indian?" Judith couldn't resist asking.

"I never think of his being an Indian—and—I love him," the woman replied gravely. "You will understand how that is some day. Maybe you do, now. Is the gentleman with you your sweetheart?"

"N—no—I don't know—maybe," she stammered, blushing.

They came outside the tepee as she spoke, and she at once knew by an odd look in Roger's eyes that he had overheard their conversation.

"Mr. E-tar-we-ge-shig is preparing us a breakfast," he said, pointing to a kettle suspended from a slanting stick.

After a palatable breakfast they walked down to the bay. The storm was over, but its effects were still visible on the tumultuous body of water.

"Our host informs me that it is sometimes 24 hours before the bay is navigable after a storm."

"Oh! Mother will worry!"

We will walk around to the lighthouse and telephone to the hotel. How would you like to be a prisoner in an Indian camp for 24 hours?"

"I think it would be novel and interesting," she declared. "Will—you like it?"

"His eyes glistened.

"It will be a day to remember."

"An Indian summer day," she suggested.

After telephoning they returned to the camp and inspected the Indian wares. Later in the afternoon a beautiful young Indian girl, the sister of E-tar-we-ge-shig, returned from a neighboring village.

"She can tell your fortune," suggested the white woman, knowing the weakness of her race.

"That will be lovely!" cried Judith enthusiastically. "Wouldn't you like to have yours told?" She appealed to Sheldon.

"My fortune has been told," he said significantly, with a shade of sadness in his voice.

She dropped her eyes and followed the Indian girl to the tepee. When she returned she was lighthearted.

"She foretold me a beautiful future," she informed Roger. "Won't you let her tell yours?"

He shook his head smiling.

"Please!" she urged, her eyes and voice pleading.

With a little laugh of compliance he went into the tepee.

"Was it a good fortune?" asked Judith shyly when he came out.

"Very good; too good to be true," he said, looking at her intently.

At twilight the waters of the bay became suddenly tranquil. After a liberal purchase of baskets and Indianware, they bade the family adieu and went down to the landing place. The west wind of the evening sighed through the rustling branches, wafting the fragrant odor of balsam. The first glint of the stars came out and the shadows gathered closer.

Roger suddenly turned from the boat and led Judith a few feet distant to a pine tree that towered in solitary grandeur from its fellows.

"Judith, I am going to tell you again that I love you. Is there any hope that you can come to care for me?"

There was a second's tremulous silence.

"I love you now, Roger!"

"When did you come to love me?" he asked, as they sped away across the water.

"I knew this morning — in the storm."

"If I hadn't consulted the young prophetess of the wigwam," he said musingly, "I never should have ventured to ask you a second time. She told me I loved a shy maiden who had refused me because she didn't know her heart at the time, and that if I would ask her again at twilight underneath a solitary pine, she would say yes. I owe my happiness to her."

"Roger!"

"Well?" he asked after a pause.

"You don't owe it to her! I told her what to say!"

Lost on Steamship.

A new plot for the writers of sea-tales became public property the other day when the Olympic, the largest ocean liner in the world, arrived at New York and reported that two stowaways found aboard soon after the liner left Southampton, England, broke out of the ship's jail and managed so successfully to hide themselves in the vessel's vast interior that they had not been discovered up to the time the passengers landed. The two stowaways after their discovery were locked in a third-class stateroom. They escaped and disappeared somewhere within the ten miles hiding space which the Olympic's myriad passages and places of concealment present. Every exit was closely guarded as the passengers disembarked, but no trace was found of the wily stowaways. If they escape altogether their adventure will become an epic in sea tales.

Freaks of Lightning.

Lightning has playfully snatched a whip from a rider's hands, made off with the knitting needles of two gossiping women who were sitting knitting, and, seizing the pitchfork from the shoulder of a farm laborer, carried it off 50 yards or thereabouts and twisted the tines into a corkscrew. It has torn the missal from the hands of a singing youth and destroyed it, and has lighted a candle and a gas jet. It has caught up the scissors from the hand of a girl seated at a sewing machine and whisked them off, while it lifted her bodily upon the machine, where she found herself when she recovered from her experience. It has melted earrings without killing the wearer.

FOR THOSE FOND OF SALSIFY

Old Recipe That Has Been Popular With European Housewives for Many Years.

Wash and scrape the salsify roots, cut off the extreme joints, stand them up and grate them. Beat three eggs light and stir them gradually into a pint of milk, with sufficient flour to make a stiff batter. Instead of grating the salsify you may cut it into pieces and boil it till quite soft, so that you can mash it easily. Add a little pepper and have ready over the fire a deep frying pan or skillet with plenty of boiling lard. Put in a large spoonful of the batter, and into the middle of each drop a spoonful of the mashed salsify. Fry these fritters to a light brown on both sides and take them out with a perforated skimmer. You may fry the mashed salsify without the batter, taking large spoonfuls and dipping each in beaten egg first, and afterward twice over in grated bread crumbs, so as to resemble fried oysters. Or you may first boil the roots and merely split them in two before frying them in fresh butter, or baking them brown in the oven.

In the KITCHEN

Boiled water poured through a tea stain will remove the discoloration.

To prevent tomato soup from curdling add hot tomatoes (with soda in) to add the thickened milk.

To keep the larder sweet place a pan of charcoal in it, for this helps greatly to keep everything sweet and wholesome.

Grease stains on leather may be removed by carefully applying benzine or perfectly pure turpentine. Wash the spots afterward with a well beaten white of an egg or a good leather reviver.

To economize on cost of lard, buy suet from your butcher, fry out at home and mix the two in equal quantities. The result serves admirably for frying purposes, for making biscuit and for ordinary pastry.

Wash windows, mirrors and tiling with a pail of water to which a tablespoonful of kerosene is added. Polish the window with chamois and tissue paper and use woolen cloths on tiling, as it absorbs moisture, saving work.

To make a jelly bag, get a square of a wool flannel—say 18 inches—fold the two opposite corners together, fell the side seam, making a three-cornered bag. Bind the top with heavy tape and fasten on the upper side two or three strong loops to hang it by.

Beefsteak Pie.

Flank steak or a slice from chuck or upper round can be utilized for the meat pie. Cut it in fingers, dredge each piece with salt and peper. Should the amount be scant, pare, quarter and parboil a few potatoes. A few ounces of raw ham cut fine and added serve to improve the flavor. Make a rich biscuit crust and roll out almost a half-inch thick. With this line a deep baking dish and fill with the prepared meat, etc. Add a half cupful of rich stock, fit on the top covering and bake in a moderate oven for an hour and a half, covering at first that the crust may not become too brown. Have ready a quart of rich gravy. When the pie is taken from the oven pour carefully in as much as it it will hold, serving the remainder separately.

Green Corn Chowder.

Green corn chowder calls for a quarter of a pound of chopped fat ham or salt pork. With it are slowly cooked two chopped onions. When beginning to change color add one quart of scraped or cut raw corn, one pint of diced raw potatoes, salt and pepper and a half pint of boiling water. Simmer slowly for 20 minutes, then add one pint of hot milk and a slight thickening of one tablespoonful each of flour and butter. When taken from the fire add a bowl of broken crackers.

Spanish Steak.

Take a flank of steak. Cut off all the fat and fry it brown in plenty of butter, lift out and put in a baking pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and fry a sliced onion brown in the butter remaining in the frying pan. Spread onions over the steak and cover it with can of tomatoes, juice, and all. Cover and bake an hour in a slow oven, basting frequently. Make gravy of drippings remaining in the pan and serve piping hot.

Green Corn Omelet.

Take four good sized ears of corn, score the rows lengthwise and scrape out the pulp. Mix with five well-beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of salt and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Heat a frying pan and drop into it a small teaspoonful of butter and shake until the bottom is evenly greased. Pour in the mixture, shake and tilt the pan until it is evenly cooked. Roll and serve quickly on a heated platter.

Ham Steaks.

Cut some rather thick slices from a ham, dredge with flour, put them in a frying pan with a teacup of water. Cook slowly, turning them two or three times till the steaks are of a light brown. Then lay them on a hot dish. Thicken the liquor in which they were cooked with a little tomato sauce and pour over. Sprinkle with cayenne pepper and serve.

HE DECLINED AN INVITATION

Jinks Got His Letters Mixed and Employer Receives Scrawl He Intended for a Friend.

The following amusing incident showing the result of absence of mind when writing letters is quoted by a Birmingham paper.

The culprit, Jinks, received one day two letters by first post. One was from his friend, Jack Smith, asking him to play in a football match; the other was an invitation from his employer, whose name was also Smith, to spend the day at his home.

Now, Jinks had long admired from afar his employer's only daughter, and this invitation was most acceptable to him. He promptly sat down and wrote a brief note of acceptance on an elaborate sheet of note paper, while to his other friend he sent a scrawl across an odd half sheet.

The next morning Jinks was surprised to see Jack Smith burst into his room exclaiming. "Why, aren't you ready?"

"Ready? I wrote you I couldn't play."

"Nonsense! You wrote me a courteous note accepting my invitation. I took your excess politeness as a joke."

"Then the guv'nor got the scrawl intended for you!" Jinks gasped.

"What did you say, old man?"

"Dear Smith: Rats! I've something better on!"

Two of a Kind.

"I find that my husband has been having the office boy call me up every day and mumble terms of endearment. That's a nice way to fool his wife. He's been going to the ball game."

"How is it that you didn't catch on to the voice?"

"Well, I'm busy at bridge every day, and I've been having the cook answer the telephone."

HIS GRIEF.

Mrs. Benton Holme—Why, Tommy, you're a perfect little pig. Now, aren't you sorry you ate so much roast beef?

Tommy—Yes'm; cause I ain't got any room left for another plate of ice cream.

Rectifying an Error.

Uncle Joe Cannon, at a dinner in Washington, said of speakers' errors: "All speakers make queer errors now and then. Usually, though, they correct them with address.

"Once, in the Illinois legislature, there were two men, Montague Harrison and Harrison Montague. The first was very short, the second very tall; but the speaker, during a debate, once addressed the former as the latter.

"He recovered himself, however, quickly. He said, with a chuckle:

" 'It is strange that I should take Harrison Montague for Montague Harrison—that I should make such a mistake as that—for there is as great difference between you two gentlemen as there is between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse.' "

He Understood.

When the ice man came out of No. 87 he found a small boy sitting on one of his blocks of ice.

" 'Eere!' he roared. "Whot are yer a-sittin' on that for? Git off of it!"

The small boy raised a tear-stained countenance. "Was yer ever a boy?" he queried, faintly.

"Of course I was!" fumed the man. "But—"

"And did you never play truant?" cut in the youngster.

"Of course I did!" snarled the ice man. "Now, then, you—"

"An' when you got home did yer father never take a stick an'—"

A lump rose slowly in the ice man's throat.

"Sit where ye are, my little man!" he gulped. "I understand!"

Real Thing Wanted.

"I want to talk to the office boy about that ball game yesterday," declared the junior partner.

"You read the accounts of the game," said the senior partner.

"That was the way the umpire saw it. I want to hear about the game as it really happened."

Co-Operative Economy.

The Wife—After all, Adolphus, this visit isn't going to be so expensive. With the half-dozen dresses I simply had to get, and your clothes cleaned and pressed, we'll manage speididly. —Pathfinder.

The Spirit That Wins.

Griggs—I admire Parker immensely. He has a hard time making both ends meet, but he's game from the word "Go."

Briggs—Game! Why, Parker looks upon the struggle with the wolf as a mere sporting event

Do your Christmas shopping.

Do you know that Richmond has a Wall street, as well as New York.

Wouldn't it jar you if Tobb developed into the [illegible] "dark horse?"

Earl is out from the San Diego field [illegible] says he [illegible] to San Francisco to do [illegible]

It is [illegible] make [illegible] have to [illegible] supporting "Uncle Abe" [illegible] mayor of Los Angeles.

Congressman Humphreys of the state of Washington arrived in Oakland today and is investigating harbor conditions relative to the appropriation to be made at the coming session of Congress.

"Bud" Mars, the aviator, will start from Sacramento on Thanksgiving day to link the high Sierras where Fowler had failed. He claims that weather conditions are now more favorable to accomplish the feat.

The fashionable divorcees of Reno have adopted the short silk sox, similar in style to those worn by juveniles. The tops of the sox extend slightly above the shoe tops, gusts of wind showing [illegible] excitement among the "bulls."

Congressman Joseph R. Knowland and wife will return to Washington next week. Mr. and Knowland will leave Washington the second week in December for the Panama Canal, accompanied by the Interstate Commission on a two weeks tour of inspection.

The Terminal acknowledges the many press notices and courtesies extended by the Contra Costa county journals. The County Press Association, now organizing, will help to promote the feeling of fellowship, and raise the standard of journalism by broadening the "scope of vision."

While the Terminal believes in political parties as the best means of presenting questions of government for general consideration, it will maintain that the honest and competent administration of public affairs is paramount to the existence of any such organization or the political welfare of individuals. In other words, efficient public service first, party integrity second, the individual last of all.

The Los Angeles Herald figures out that the Angel City will have 925,000 inhabitants by 1920, and considerably over a million by 1920. This is a modest estimate Indeed, we think it is too small by at least thirty five. E. T. Earl ought to count for at least a million—the other folks ought to count for something. According to the Herald's computation Los Angeles will be the largest city in the world by 1939. Then it will burst.—Oakland Tribune.

The Terminal does not expect to set the journalistic world on fire, nor to achieve great prominence at a bound, flattering as has been its reception at all times. It does believe, however, that there is a field in this community for a newspaper which will order its course on the broad basis of the common good; which will try to be fair to all regardless of station, party, creed or color; which will be controlled by no motive except that of serving the public and deserving its confidence; which will ever bear in mind the welfare of the homes of Richmond and vicinity, along with its various lines of business and other interests. That place the Terminal will honestly and faithfully try to fill.

Another Big Leaguer Arrives.

"You see, fellers, it is just dis way," said Ping, on returning to his home in Richmond after a most successful season with the Big Eastern League. "Myself, Ty Cobb and Baker simply got de goats of all de big kink pitchers. Have you observed that all de top notchers are from California, the state that furnishes the material in the way of ball players? When I come up for batting in de late world's series, de crowd would yell: 'Pete's the window smasher from Richmond! Close de shutters, please.' Yep, nuthin' to do till next spring."

Pretty Fair.

Richmond once was a little burg,
But now she's growing big
With prospects for a harbor
That'll put San Pedro 'on the pig.'

So deep and wide and nifty

That our continental landing

ELECTRIC SIGN TO ADVERTISE

Nicholl Nob to Be Ornamented With Illuminated Words For Richmond.

The Richmond Realty board held a special meeting last Tuesday evening to hear representatives of the California State Realty Federation who came to explain to the local organization the benefits of joining the work of the Federation. Mabry McMahon of San Francisco, one of the States most successful real estate men, President of the State Federation together with the Field Secretary, Mr. James G. Stafford of Los Angeles were entertained by the Executive Committee of the local Real Estate Board, enjoying a short ride about the city and being banqueted at the Germania Hotel, after which they were driven to the offices of the Knowles & Ferguson, the local headquarters. There were about forty members present at the meeting and the visitors were introduced by President D A. Knowles. Mr. McMahan, in his talk, outlined the two principal reasons for the State Realty Federations' existing, which are, the attention of the Federation to the investigation of frauds and fakes in the colonization in land selling business and their exposure. In this way the Federation protects the membership from unprincipled and dishonest dealers, also the investing public from the loss of money that would be thrown away on many questionable propositions. This naturally turns such money into legitimate business and real estate channels. Superintendent H. B. Kinney, of the Western States Gas and Electric Co. was present at the meeting and proposed a novel scheme for a mighty electrical display, designed to boost Richmond from the summit of Nicholl Nob, so that all the world may see and know Richmond's location on the map. The estimated cost of the great sign is about $2000 per year and the success of the plan would necessitate entering into a five year contract with the Electric Company.

Mr. Kinney desired the realty men to get behind the scheme to enable him to get the support of the city for the big sign, which they promised to do at their next meeting Tuesday November 22, 1911.

Big Land Deal.

B Schapiro & Co. the well known Richmond and San Francisco real estate firm, who have successfully handled a number of suburban subdivisions, have embarked into the Country Land business; having recently purchased the well known Fountain Fennel Ranch, consisting of 5000 acres on the Sacramento River, in Tehama County.

This body of land is conceded to be the choicest alfalfa, vegetable and fruit land in the state. This enterprising company is rushing the irrigating system to completion and this magnificent ranch will be subdivided into 10, 20 and 40 acres tracts, which will be placed on the market at a reasonable price and on most reasonable terms.

Mr. John E. Bouquet, one of the officials of this company, will devote a part of his time in handling special parties, who may be interested in choice country land, from Richmond and San Francisco. He feels confident that all those who wish to make an investment will be amply repaid by joining him and investigate this new tract of land that is now being subdivided.

A COLD BATH.

A well dressed lady, refined in appearance, was taken into a boat in which two hunters were shooting ducks Wednesday morning from a blind off the bay shore at Stege. The woman seemed demented and was wading out to deep water garbed in street dress and shoes, and from all appearances, enjoying the situation. She was taken care of by friends from San Francisco, the names of the parties not being obtainable.

KEY ROUTE COMING.

It is stated by good authority that the United Properties Company along with the Key Route Company are preparing to extend the latter line from Albany, the present terminus, to Richmond, and that the right of way is now being secured. The Key Route will establish shops in Richmond and employ a large number of men.

Richmond to the Fore.

The "Show Place," inaugurated by the Key Route Company at 687 Market street, San Francisco, first floor of the Monadnock building, has on exhibition there the finest display of products manufactured on the Pacific Coast. The California Wine Association, and the Standard Oil refinery have the largest display of products, while the Western Pipe and Steel Works and the Pullman Company also of Richmond has a most unique display among the other elaborate ones. Mayor Owens is in charge of the exhibits to boost and give publicity to the "Lowell of the Pacific Coast."

City Airs For Albany.

Albany, Richmond's thriving suburb on the southeast, will have city mail carrier service in the near future. Postmaster Merrill of Berkeley, with the assistance of Congressman Knowland, has succeeded in having the matter taken up by the department at Washington with the result that Albany residents will soon have two deliveries each day, being served through the West Berkeley postoffice. They say that Richmond will soon have mail service too, and Albany people would like to see the carrier service extended to Richmond.

Fire Fighting Apparatus.

Richmond is getting ready for 1915. Having built a fire house at a cost of about $14,600 the city council on Monday night authorized the purchase out of the general fund, a Seagrave auto fire truck. The engine will cost $6,500 and it will be delivered in March. Fire House No. 2 will get their improvements next, after the second installment of taxes, or in 1913 sure, as No. 2 is in the center of population and the city council will modernize this one, at Macdonald Avenue and, as one of the councilmen says: "Rome was not built in a day."

Knowland, the Man.

The assistance of Congressman Knowland will be appreciated by the citizens of Richmond in his efforts to secure aid from the federal government at Washington for the Inner Harbor project. City Attorney Ben Griffin is the live wire who has taken the matter up in behalf of the city, and has secured the pledge of Knowland to resume activity in the promotion of this most important project.

After Stege Saloons.

Stege saloonkeepers are alarmed at the activity of the Anti Saloon League, which is making preparations to operate in Stege and rid that community of its 36 saloons, which are said to kept open all day and night, some of the road houses doing a thriving business during the early morning hours. The big league has a corps of workers in the field, and later the voters will decide for or against the saloons.

Another Factory for Richmond.

The Giant Valve Company has decided to locate in Richmond, and has taken options on several factory sites, East Richmond having the preference. This factory will employ 50 men on the start which is to be increased to 150.

Stege to Have Jail.

The progressive suburb of Stege will in the near future have a jail in which to incarcerate lawbreakers for safe keeping. This will obviate taking prisoners to Richmond and lessen the burdens and inconvenience of Constable Davis.

A FIRE IS A FIRE.

It is about time that the center of our city had a fire house that is a credit to the east side and a fire fighting equipment for our east side firemen who have long distances to run to a fire in most instances, as every councilman knows. A citizen who owns property on both sides said: "We do not seem to be properly represented in the council; do not misunderstand me, he said; I want to see improvements and I think the west side needed the big 80 horse power auto truck to climb the hills, but where are the councilmen who represent the rapidly increasing population around the busy thoroughfares on the eastside? do not seem to be doing the proper thing, or all the fire departments would be accorded the same rights and privileges as citizens; a fire is a fire and no one section should be favored in this respect; the council-man who right now, does not favor the purchase of modern equipment for No 2, No 3, No. 4 and No. 6 should step down and out; people do not object to the expenditure for fire-fighting modern equipments as long as it is the people's money; now editor, next to public health comes fire protection; as fire protection is needed, and as about $23,000 has been used for No. 1, out of the general fund of people's money let every citizen on the east side have a mass meeting, establish the fire districts and start initiative legislation for a bond election to give to the Santa Fe, the Macdonald avenue district, Twenty-Third street and Winehaven so that all shall have equal facilities at equal cost; it is all one city, but it is up to the city council to make it so, or I am A. Mutt."

TO WIDEN SIXTH STREET.

There is a wonderful improvement started on the south side towards the inner harbor that will benefit the city $100,000, and that is the widening of Sixth street from Ohio avenue to the southern water front, and this can be done now before the large advance in values.

It is proposed to make Sixth-st. a central thoroughfare to the busy center and connecting with the boulevard leading to another center. This improvement ought to be carried through at the earliest possible moment and the property owners can have it and suddenly open up a large business center direct from the shipping. Those who give property towards this street will make their remaining portions of lots worth three times more. From the northern water front to Ripley avenue, Sixth street will also be widened. The traffic along the entire Sixth st. from Pennsylvania ave. to the inner harbor across Cutting boulevard helps every part of this city. Boost for a wider Sixth street and a busier city from front to front and back to back.

City News.

C. E. Clark, the real estate man, has returned from a business trip to Fresno.

Joel R. Scott, Esq., attorney at law, will open up an office at the busy "Hub."

C. C. Kennedy recently moved into his new bungalow, one of the modern residences of our city.

A very large furniture house is looking for a location in the vicinity of Seventh Street and Chanslor and Ohio avenues.

Many San Pablo traders and from the County Line and Stege and Pullman are seen visiting the stores of Richmond.

A relative of the Terminal editor is to be the next mayor of Cincinnati. It is charged the administration was on the side of "Boss" Cox.

According to the new directory for Richmond the population of the city exclusive of suburbs has increased 1500. Counting in the suburbs 2500 is the total increase.

It is a remarkable coincident that W. S. McRacken opened a Richmond pioneer store and called it "The Hub" and is now selling goods at the "Hub of Richmond," near Sixth and Macdonald avenue.

Little Gerald Follett, son of the councilman, is rapidly recovering from his injuries sustained in a foot ball game.

A surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Greenslade Saturday night, the occasion being their thirteenth wedding cycle.

The city has granted the Union Water Co. the privilege of invasion of the Santa Fe district and to supply Adam's ale to residents.

The city council, at the Monday night's meeting a petition for the widening of Sixth street, from Ohio to Potrero avenue was presented, but no immediate action was taken by Richmond's little legislature. Attorney Windrem represented the petitioners.

The Liberty Bakery wagon going north on Seventh Street early this morning collided with an auto bound east at the intersection at Macdonald avenue. The pole of the wagon was broken and the rear seat of the buzz wagon telescoped and was thrown from the machine. No one was injured.

DEATH OF PIONEER.

Since our last issue we regret to note the passing of a prominent and respected fellow citizen, president of the Bank of Richmond. Many months ago William Mintzer, Esq., was granted a leave of absence for one year and while undergoing a treatment for a fatal malady his wife was taken ill and after a surgical operation, died, her mother preceding her to the grave by a short time. Mr. Mintzer returned to San Francisco and after a lingering illness died, but never returned to the bank which is the oldest and one of the strongest banks of Richmond. Wm. F. Belding, Sr. and Cashier Waverley Stairley, directors of the bank of Richmond attended the funeral of this good man.

Tuesday will hereafter be special visiting card day at the Terminal Fine assortment, at bargain prices, printed on stock of the best quality. It pays to have your printing done by printers in a real printshop—not by amateurs and novices.

Two Archaeological Finds.

Two interesting archaeological discoveries have just been made in the Fen country of England. The first is a sequel to the partial opening of a low mound at Eye, near Peterborough, only a few feet high, but forty yards in diameter. The mound, known as Oliver Cromwell's Hill, was partly explored last year by Thurlow Leeds, of Eyebury, who found evidence that it was a burial place dating probably 2,000 years before the Christian era. Mr. Leeds now announces that he has been able to complete his investigation, and has found the skeleton of a tall man, who must have been buried more than 3,000 years ago. No pottery or implements were found near the body, but last year's excavation brought to light a small, hand-made pot of coarse ware, traces of a huge fire, and some bones—possibly relics of a burial feast or sacrifices.

The second discovery is that the district was a waste of waters

Most Powerful Poison.

From the microbe which gives rise in human beings to the disease known as tetanus, or lockjaw, a poison called tetanine is obtained which is over 100 times more powerful than strychnine. A fragment of tetanine so small as to be invisible to the naked eye would kill almost instantaneously the strongest man. One fifteen-thousandth part of a grain of it has caused the death of a horse 1,600,000,000 times its own weight.

Of No Use.

"Doctor," she asked, in pleading tones, "do you think it will be necessary for me to have an operation?"

"Oh, I hardly think so," he replied.

"There! I told my husband it wouldn't be any use coming to you. My next-door neighbor has a doctor who has prescribed three operations for her during the past year."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fisherman's Luck.

A monster trout weighing ninety-three pounds was landed by a Belfast angler the other day. The fish, an ordinary brown trout, is the largest trout caught in Ulster within the memory of the oldest Waltonian by rod and line.

Kind of Him.

Provincial Mayor (who is making a bid for popularity, to representative of the press)—"Come in; take a seat. I always treats reporters as if they was gentlemen."—Punch.

Truely Appropriate.

The organist was not lacking in patrotism, says the New York Sun, yet he rebelled when requested to play "The Star Spangled Banner," at a wedding. "It is not appropriate," he said. "Ain't it," said the bride's father. "For this wedding it is the most appropriate thing you can play. Cut all the rest of the program if you like, but stick to that. I had the hardest kind of a fight to keep Belle's mother from marrying her off to a foreigner. Between Belle and me we won out for an American, and if this isn't the time for 'The Star Spangled Banner,' I'd like to know what is."

Pavilion Is Kaiser's Design.

Over the fountain Augusta Victoria at Hamburg is to be built a pavilion after the style of a Roman temple. This has been designed by the German emperor, who has also composed the following inscription for the fountain: "Nymph, dispense the healing waters to the sick; may God restore them, cured and rejoicing, to their families."

Very Ambitious.

"My hair," remarked the middle-aged man, sadly, "is the most ambitious thing about me, it seems."

"What's the answer?" queried his friend.

"It's always coming out on top," explained the first party.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Iceland's Minerals.

Besides gold and copper, silver has also been discovered in Iceland by a French engineer. The mines are situated in the mountain of Ingolfsfjall, in the environs of Oelfus, South Iceland. The mountain belongs to some farmers, and an engineer, on behalf of a French company, has purchased the right of digging. English companies have now rented certain Icelandic districts where gold mines were discovered.

It Was No Porterhouse.

"How did you find your steak, sir?" inquired the expectant waiter, as he held out his hand to receive a tip.

"Only by dogged perseverance," replied the guest. "The chef hid it under a Brussels sprout to keep it hot."—Youth's Companion.

A Fidgety Age.

Repose of manner was considered at one time essential to the well bred woman, but this is an ideal consigned to the past. Every one fidgets in these days, no one has time to sit still, nor to listen for more than a minute at a time without being bored and showing it.—From the Queen.

The late shah of Persia owned a dagger which is said to make its possessor invincible. But as the superstition is that he who uses it shall inevitably perish by it, it is kept securely locked in a sandalwood box.

PROTEST OF NEW ZEALAND

Land of Radical Legislation Objects Because Its Premier Has Accepted a Baronetcy.

We have, as a nation, been inclined to look on the New Zealanders as a queer lot. But at last, though we have hardly been able to understand their government of strongly socialistic tendencies, we are able to understand one protest they are raising. Joseph Ward is the premier of the country. When Dick Seddon was running a "pub" and working in the mines in the north island, and Hall-Jones was a carpenter, Joe Ward—if our memory does not fail us—was working as a telegraph operator somewhere around Christ church or Dunedin.

Then came that revolution, which followed the great maritime strike almost twenty years ago, with the result that the old Tory party of land monopolists was thrown out bodily, and the butcher, baker and candlestick maker moved into the old rattletrap frame parliament building at Wellington to run the country. With plain, burly old Dick Seddon and old Scotch farmer John McKenzie at the head of the machinery, New Zealand started in on the most radical legislation that the world has seen for a long time. It was well suited to New Zealand and New Zealand was well suited to it and though there have been great failures at certain times and points, the sum total has been good.

In the meantime the character of the New Zealand people has changed. People who, when they were landless and homeless, were radical enough, are out-and-out Conservatives now and are ready to denounce any radical legislation that will affect their acres or holdings. Likewise have the butcher, baker and candlestick maker changed. Dick Seddon died true to his start—a rough miner—but Ward soon blossomed out as Joseph Ward, and then, four years ago, he was knighted. Sir Joseph and Lady Ward did not, however, sit well with the New Zealanders. At the recent colonial conference Sir Joseph accepted a baronetcy. This was just beyond the limit for democratic New Zealand for now the title "Sir" became hereditary. New Zealand has kicked out a hereditary land monopoly and now it is up in arms against a hereditary aristocracy. According to the dispatches Sir Joseph's political sun is sinking. New Zealand prefers to accept Gladstone and Seddon, who refused such honors, as her examples.

Western Life.

"Why can't I get my number?" demanded a prominent citizen of Painted Post.

"Line's busy," replied the telephone girl.

"I don't believe it."

"Well, it's so, just the same. Some cowboys have borrowed it to hang a horsethief with."—Washington Star.

Was a Relative.

A little child was seen walking around near "the bearded lady," at one of the side shows at a country fair. The child being evidently on good terms with the barker, indicated to the onlookers that it was probably related to the bewhiskered female, so she asked the child: "Is the bearded lady your mother?" "No," answered the child, "she is my father."

Considerable Lobster.

The largest lobster taken off the Maine coast for a number of years was caught recently by the Portland fishing steamer Carrie and Mildred. The crustacean weighed a strong seven pounds and was nearly three feet in length. The legs were nearly as large as the claws of an ordinary lobster, while the claws were huge affairs.

The Preacher Knew.

When volunteer prayers were called for a man struck in and prayed very earnestly for his poor land, and asked the Lord to give him a good crop.

"What that land of yours needs, brother, is not prayer, but manure," said the preacher, "as he gave out, "Work, For the Night Is Coming."

Fashion in Sacerdotal Guise.

Mamie attended kindergarten at Christ church and was very much impressed with her surrounding. "They are so stylish at that church," she explained to her mother. "Every morning two men come down to the kindergarten to say prayers, wearing black skirts and white overdress."—Success Magazine.

Electric Kissing.

There seems to be another new thing in electricity. The little manicure girl in one of the recent plays says to her admirer: "Yes, you did kiss me! You kissed me seven times—four times direct and three times alternating."

Dog in the Potatoes.

John Di Silvestro, editor of La Voce del Popolo, an Italian daily newspaper of Chicago, tells of an old potato seller in the colony here who used a small dog to great advantage.

"This old man retailed potatoes," said Di Silvestro. "He went from house to house with his dog on his shoulders, and if a person wanted anything from a peck to a bushel he could be accommodated.

"One of my friends who had been buying regularly from the old potato vender was surprised one day when his wife told him that they were being cheated.

"'Old Giuseppe wouldn't cheat,' he said.

"When the old man delivered his next bushel of potatoes the wife called her husband and together they went into the kitchen and measured the potatoes. The shortage was a peck.

"After that they watched old Giuseppe, and, much to their surprise, found that every time he came to deliver the potatoes he walked out of the alley, accompanied by a small dog.

"This small dog, however, never came in with him.

"The man and wife became curious about this dog, and hid in the kitchen. One day they watched old Giuseppe empty his bag on the floor. As he did so the little dog jumped out.

"The animal had taken up the space of a peck of potatoes and was better than a false measure."

First Woman for High Honor.

Mlle. Lucienne Heuvelmans, the first woman in the history of the Academy of the Beaux Arts, Paris, to win the Grand Prix de Rome for sculpture, was born in Paris on Christmas day, 1880. Her sculpture is "Electra Guarding the Sleeping Orestes." Two years ago she won the second grand prix. Her father is engaged in artistic cabinet work. She took up sculpture seriously when she was 18. For some years she has been teaching drawing and modeling at the communal schools. By reason of her award she will be the first woman at the Villa Medicis since the French school in Rome was established, over 300 years ago.

Buddhism and Animal Life.

It must be said of Buddhism that it has left one indelible mark all over India, China, and the east, and that is the teaching of gentleness and kindness to one another and to animals. Buddha taught that life is but a prolonged endeavor to escape from suffering, and that, therefore, to cause others to suffer is the unforgiveable sin.—Price Collier in Scribner's Magazine.

Only Married Men Count.

In Corea marriage is even more important and essential for a man than it is for a woman as, until a man he wed, he is a being of no account. If a father has not selected wives for his sons ere they reach the age of twenty he is considered worthless and neglectful.

Why the Earth Was So Named.

The name earth is derived from an old verb, "ear," which meant "to plow," and was in use at the time the Bible was translated under King James. Earth signifies, accordingly, what can be plowed.

HE HANDICAPS HIS CHILDREN

Giving Each of Them a Million, Western Financier May Prove to Be Unwise Father.

A man out west, described as the "pioneer financier" of his city, has just kept an agreement or promise made fifteen years ago with himself as the party of the second part and presumably non-enforceable from lack of valuable consideration, that he would retire from business when he had a million dollars to give to each of his children. He had three of them when this announcement was made, and even that number rendered the self-assumed task one that for most people would have made the day of retirement and dignified leisure to be sufficiently remote. The three children have since increased to six, but the requisite half-dozen millions are said to be now in hand, with a modest surplus for the pioneer financier's own support in his work-declining years, though they be as many as he doubtless hopes and expects them to be.

This man will of course be praised for showing more moderation than a good many other millionaires and stopping acquisition when he had what he wanted instead of when he had all he could get. On the other hand, it can safely be assumed that in moments of franker self-communings he sincerely admires himself as a man who has "done well," as the saying is, for his offspring.

But has he? Unquestionably the New York Times remarks, he has acted as do all loving parents, whatever in academic discussion they may say about the ennobling and developing effects of hardship and poverty—that is, he has taken measures to safeguard his own children from both and has given them that long "start in life" which he himself did not have. But they will go through none of the experiences to which, whether rightly or wrongly, he no doubt ascribes what he no doubt holds to be his own success. Theirs will be quite different experiences and of the kind which all the wise ones, in talk and writing, proclaim to be—theoretically—most alarming.

So one can express with a fair semblance of sincerity great wonder how this man can consider himself a good father—how he justifies himself in handicapping each of those six children with the heavy burden of a million—how he can expect in the many-houred days before him to soothe his uneasy conscience

Took in the Situation.

"John, here are your slippers."

"Thank you!"

"And your smoking jacket."

"How good you are!"

"And your pipe and tobacco."

"That's kind!"

"Mollie, let's be perfectly candid with each other. What kind of a birthday present do you want?"

Growing Beet Sugar in England.

Remarkable success has attended the efforts of growers of sugar beets in Herefordshire, England. A good high average for a crop is 15 tons to the acre of roots bearing 15 per cent. of sugar. The Herefordshire farmers, in spite of rough and ready methods and small knowledge of the crop, grew up to 27½ tons to the acre, with a sugar content of 19 per cent. The purity of the sugar was exceptionally high.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

Tourists in Ireland.

The world is always willing to give every renaissance a chance, and we have ours now. Are we going to take it? This matter of tourist organization may seem, at first sight, to be a small one. But our attitude towards it will be regarded, and rightly regarded as a sign of our whole attitude towards the things that the modern world of business considers most important. If we take no pains at all to preserve and garner the golden harvest which is open to us in the tourist traffic, we shall be set down as hopelessly incompentent in practical affairs. If our visitors are bored or cheated, if they are allowed to go away in ignorance of the best views, the finest scenery, if they do not find the facilities that they have a right to expect, the damning rumor will spread abroad that Ireland is "pretty, of course, but so dirty and uncomfortable." Not only will our tourist stream dry up, but every Irish product, from lace to butter, will have to fight against that vague, intangible prejudice against Irish goods and Irish methods as being dirty and unbusinesslike.—Weekly Irish Times.

First Meal of the Day.

Breakfast is, before all things, a respectable meal. One cannot imagine a man or woman who is always down punctually to breakfast being other than a highly reputable member of society. The Fatal Ring.

An amazing story is told by the late head of the Paris morgue. Five times within his experience dead bodies brought to the morgue were found to be wearing a certain ring easily distinguishable by its strange design. It bore in Eastern characters this legend: "May whosoever wears this ring die a miserable death." M. Mace, late chief of the Paris police, vouches for the truth of this.

The Imagination of Corot.

Imagination and invention are often taken as the same thing, whereas they are as different as wit and humor. The question of imagination in a painter's work is not to be estimated in terms of literature, but in terms of paint. The delicate silver grays and cool, translucent greens of Corot are of the essence of imagination, as I understand the word.—R. B. Cunninghame Graham.

Wheat Cheaper Than Rice.

Under present conditions in the rice market of South China the poorer classes find that they can live more cheaply on wheat products. The demand for flour is thus increasing greatly and flour is selling in districts where it had been almost unknown.

The Strenuous Modern Sunday.

Sunday has ceased to be a day of rest. To many people it is the most strenuous day of the week. Skating, bridge, golf, social engagements claim the attention. People may be induced to go to a concert, a lecture, or a Sunday play, but a sermon is "the limit."—Gentlewoman.

Mrs. Grundy.

"What will Mrs. Grundy say?" This query occurs in an old play called "Speed the Plough." The author of it was one Thomas Morton, a forgotten playwright. First acted in 1798—the year of the Battle of the Nile, and the Irish Rebellion—this play had then a "run" of forty-one nights and subsequently it was much revived. A farmer's wife in the play, Mrs. Ashfield by name, insistently refers to her rival, the wife of a neighboring farmer, whom she calls Mrs. Grundy. This second woman does not appear on the stage. It is the ruling passion with Mrs. Ashfield to have everything superior to what Mrs. Grundy may possess. In the keenness of feminine rivalry Mrs. Ashfield is controlled in all her investments in personal apparel, when selecting her new gown, her bonnet, her jewelry, in all she does, indeed, by the determination to "spite" her rival as expressed in the exclamation, "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" From Morton's "Speed the Plough" came to us the invisible yet ubiquitous Mrs. Grundy. By a curious transfer of symbolism, however, Mrs. Grundy passed with time into a concrete and personal equivalent for the public opinion which supports the proprieties, the respectabilities.

Well, Stymie!

Sausages are growing in favor in this city, and one West Philedlphia woman who has just grown fond of them was talking with a neighbor, says the Philadelphia Times.

"Did you ever try those that come without skins; the kind you buy by the pound?" the neighbor asked.

"Oh, dear no, and I don't think I shall," the other answered. "Jim is such a golf fiend I'm sure he wouldn't eat any kind of sausage except those that come in links."

It Was Her Fate.

The young woman sat before her glass and gazed long and earnestly at the reflection there. She screwed up her face in many ways. She fluffed her hair and then smoothed it down again. She raised her eyes and lowered them; she showed her teeth and she pressed her lips tightly together. At last she got up, with a weary sigh, and said: "It's no use. I'll be some kind of a reformer."

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P.
